One fascinating item is the 2015-2016 responsive to "The district central office is responsive to the input and concerns of families." For all families, it was 21.5% agree/strongly agree, 47.1% neutral and 31.4% disagree or strongly disagree. However, it is white families who have the least faith in central office with just 15.3% of them agreeing. This may be that white families are more linked in with the working of the central office than other groups or may be pickier.

It will be interesting to see how Tacoma School District fares with four charters opening in its district. As well, Seattle will see a couple of top players in charters - Summit and Green Dot - opening schools here. In Feb. 2016, we will have the Seattle School District's Operations levy and Capital levy (BTA IV). They have fierce competition in November 2015 from both a levy from the Mayor on transportation ($900M+) and King County (about $400M).
