Allan Hills 84001 is a fragment of a Martian meteorite that was found in the Allan Hills in Antarctica on December 27, 1984, by a team of American meteorite hunters from the ANSMET project. Like other members of the shergottite:nakhlite:chassignite group of meteorites, ALH84001 is thought to have originated on Mars. However, it does not fit into any of the previously discovered SNC groups. Its mass upon discovery was 1.93 kilograms. In 1996, a group of scientists claimed to have found ...

Weir originally published The Martian on his own website before the book grew in popularity and was picked up by an agent. Yet like most writers at the start of their journey, Weir was very much alone. Themes of isolation and loneliness permeate the entire narrative of The Martian told as it is by protagonist Mark Watney after he is stranded on Mars. Watney's stubborn determination to survive reflects virtually every person's struggle to learn, to keep going, to fall, and to pick ...
