One of the problems the two friends looked at was a version of a century-old unsolved question in geometry.

“The problem is so easy to state and so easy to understand, but it’s really hard,” said Elizabeth Denne of Washington and Lee University. It starts with a closed loop — any kind of curvy path that ends where it starts.

The problem Greene and Lobb worked on predicts, basically ...

Article: The Sacred Geometry of Tarot | OpEdNews

Developing Thinking in Geometry was one of a suite of modules originally developed as part of a post-graduate diploma for practising teachers and launched in 2005. It is now fifteen years old and is studied by level three undergraduate students, many but not all of whom intend to enter the teaching profession. The time has come to replace it with a new module written for contemporary students ...
