What if a flying saucer landed on the White House lawn today - what would you do? That has been a sci-fi scenario for quite a while. The world falls into madness as the alien overlords begin to systematically eliminate the human population for one bizarre reason or another. It's an idea that sells a lot of books and movie tickets, but it also brings to light something else. Like snakes and spiders, people are inherently afraid of an encounter with life forms not of this Earth. Nowadays, the general population is more open to the idea that we are not alone in this universe. But what does that really mean? And what if aliens were not just a question on a survey? What if they were real? How would the world respond to a true encounter - how would you react?

The result of an exhaustive study of Sir Patrick Moore's observations of the Moon and planets for more than 60 years, this book is a fantastic companion to the extremely popular, "It Came From Outer Space Wearing an RAF Blazer!" written by the same author. Moore recorded his telescopic observations in his logbooks, which are reproduced and described here in detail, along with his sketches and notes. In this light, the author discusses the factors that caused Moore to switch from lunar observing to planetary and variable star observing. He has also included personal recollections and humorous anecdotes from Moore's friends and acquaintances, as well as a look at his best loved books. Further chapters describe Moore's foreign travels and correspondence with those back home. Lastly, the author has not neglected a few of Moore's most memorable television and radio appearances, which are examined along with a close up of what it was like to visit Moore's beloved home of Farthings in Selsey. Essentially, this is a book written by popular demand from the readers of the author's original biography, who craved more of Moore!
