Catherine of Aragon was fully prepared to challenge Henry VIII's desire for a marriage annulment. Least of all was Catherine willing to go quietly. Catherine was a devout Roman Catholic and to her marriage was a sacred act not to be trivialised in the manner Henry seemed to be doing.

Catherine of Aragon and Divorce - History Learning Site

King Henry VIII of England's divorce, or annulment, of Catherine of Aragon in 1533 is one of the most infamous separations in history. And while we nearly all know the end result of the divorce proceedings, in hindsight who had the stronger case? Victor Gamma considers this in part 1 of the series.
